

March 25, 2006

To Whom It May Concern:

As a college graduation gift, my parents offered to treat me to the greatest gift they could ever give: 20/20 vision. I was initially slightly hesitant to go through with the surgery; I have allergies, leading to dry eyes, and the whole general concept was a little overwhelming. I spoke to a very helpful and pleasant consultant, who informed me that I was a candidate for the operation, and I also spoke to an ophthalmologist in concern to my dry eyes. I was impressed here: she wanted to treat my eyes for their dryness before allowing me to go through with the operation. If the drops didn't work, she explained, I would have to hold off on the operation for a few years. It was not about making a sale to whoever was willing to pay, but rather about helping Diamond Vision's patients to see as we never could before.

As it turned out, I went through with the operation. I was so nervous on the day of the surgery, but all of the people working in the office were, as usual, so kind and eager to make the experience as pleasant as possible, that my nerves were soon calmed. The operation itself is a little scary, but it is over before I even realized what was happening - and I have had great vision ever since!!

The ability to see clearly is a gift that I thought would never be given to me, without contacts or glasses. Being able to drive without worrying about my contacts drying up, or going swimming without them popping out, or worrying about losing my glasses is a freedom that is just amazing. I would recommend Diamond Vision as the place to go for this kind of operation without question; in fact, I have already told several of my friends to go there. The doctors are willing to take the time to answer questions, and the entire atmosphere of the office and its employees is exactly as it seems - pleasant, helpful, and kind. This made the overall experience even better.

I had a wonderful experience with Diamond Vision. They took care of me from the beginning to the end without any frustration, problems, or rude, arrogant workers. Everyone I have come in contact with made the experience all the better. I would recommend anyone to come to Diamond Vision for their Lasik surgery.

Sincerely,

Stacey